Based on two parallel premises, Net.It proposes to identify and describe an existing and multi-disciplinary network that has established connections between the city, architecture, design, and photography. Concurrently, editor, G. Pino Scaglione, gathers projects and writings from a diverse group of Italian architects that outlines the intense exchange of ideas within a country where such interaction is often difficult and far from straightforward. In this challenging setting, such obstacles demand new and creative working methods that give rise to unexpected connections and creative results that combine individuals and talents from diverse backgrounds and areas of expertise. Net.It presents a cross-section of this design community, composed of individuals and groups who have blend together to promote new initiatives and enhance their visibility within and beyond Italian borders. Works include those by Multiplicity, Armin Linke, Avatar, Nunzio Battaglia, Ian+, Stalker, Fabrizio Leoni, Gabriele Basilico and Dapstudios, among others.
