Anyone who's ever been to a Mexican city has walked through the zocalo - the central plaza - and the public market, watching the rich human interactions that occur in the space. Architect-urban planner Juan Jose Sanchez Aedo is known for designing gleaming commercial centers and shopping malls that serve as the contemporary version of the zocalo and the mercado publico. This richly illustrated monograph features 12 public spaces designed by Sanchez Aedo's firm, Arquitech, in the most elegant districts and suburbs of Mexico City, showing how human interaction can happen in settings new and old.
