An unrivalled collection of source material, combined with expert commentary and analysis, provides an indispensable resource for students of the law relating to civil liberties and human rights

The tried and tested approach places the extracts from cases and materials at the Centre of students' learning, thus ensuring that they become comfortable working extensively with primary sources and develop their general legal skills

An Online Resource Centre, featuring regular updates to the text, ensures that the book remains current between editions

Includes a section on discrimination law by Professor Aileen McColgan, providing an expert examination of this key area

New to this Edition:

Thoroughly revised and restructured to ensure that the book remains fully focused on meeting the needs of the modern law student

Full attention is paid to the relevant protections, and ensuing case law, of the Human Rights Act 1998 and the European Convention on Human Rights in the context of civil liberties

Features a specialist contribution on discrimination law from Professor Aileen McColgan
