In order to repatriate the victims of a massacre, a young officer is sent to a lost village in the southeast of Mexico. First mistake: move there with her seven-year-old daughter. Second: open her house to a survivor. Third: argue that a criminal group is against Central American migrants. And fourth: try to resolve a simple question: why does no one seem to care? Composed like a kaleidoscope that records all the tones of sarcasm, La Fila India is the mature novel by Antonio Ortuno. An exciting story, a half black novel, which offers us a group of unforgettable characters, a prose that is hard to beat and the look of an author that registers how to break down the relationship between one individual and the country in which they live.
